AUTUMNAL GLORIES.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER. The summer warmth has left the sky, The summer songs have died away And, withered, in the footpath lie The fallen leaves, but yesterday With ruby and with topas gay.

The grass is browning on the hills; No pale, belated flowers recall The astral fringes of the rills, And drearly the dead leaves fall, Frost-blackened from the roadside wall. Yet, through the gray and sombre wood, Against the dusk of fir and pine, Last of their foral sisterhood. The hazel's yellow bleasoms shine, The tawny gold of Afric's mine.

Small beauty hath my unsung flower,
For Spring to own or Summer hall;
But, in the season's saddest hour.
To skies that weep and whods that wall,
Its glad surprisals never fail.

Oh, days grown cold! Oh, life grown old! No rose of June may block again; But like the hazel's twisted gold. Through early frest and later rain Shall hints of summer time remain. And as within the hazel's bough
A gift of mysic virtue dwells,
That points to golden ores below,
And is dry desert places tells
How flow unseen the cool, aweet wells, So, in the wise Diviner's hands, Be mine the grateful hazel's part; To feel, beneath a thirsty land,

The living waters thrill and start. The beating of the rivulets heart! Sufficient me the gift to light

With latest bloom the dark cold days;
Tocal some hidden spring to sight
That, in these dry and dusty ways,
Shall stog its pleasant soags of praise. Oh. Love! the hazel-wand may fail, But then caust lend the surer spell, That, passing over Raca's vale,

Repeats the old-time miracle, And makes the desert land a well.
